Biography & Career Timeline

Early influences & Beginning (1997)

Andrea Frittella's musical path began in Italy in the late '80s, where pop and Italo disco first sparked his interest. With radio, TV, and cassette tapes as his main gateways, he absorbed all kinds of music he could get his hands on — from pop and disco to rock, electronic experiments, and beyond. This eclectic exposure shaped a wide-open taste that would later fuel his own productions and DJ sets, rooted in disco and house but never confined to a single style.

By the mid-'90s, he was experimenting with his father's Farfisa keyboard, gradually moving from curiosity to a deeper passion for production. In 1997, fascinated by DJ culture, Andrea began playing clubs and venues across his region in Italy, building his style through constant exploration of both classic and contemporary sounds. Alongside performing, he explored music technology—from PlayStation music software to early versions of Fruity Loops on a custom-built PC. This technical angle developed in parallel with his career as a software engineer, a dual path he continues today.

The Relative Depth Era (2006-2010)

In 2006, Andrea co-founded the project Relative Depth with two friends (Claudio Mastroddi and Stefano Calonico). Their releases found a home on Italian vinyl labels such as Emotiva and Paprika, and they brought their music to audiences through hybrid live sets combining computers, vintage synths, and drum machines. This mix of tools helped define their sound and built connections within Italy's electronic underground.

Irregular Disco Workers (2010-2017)

In 2010, Andrea shifted focus to a new project with Cloned In Vatican: Irregular Disco Workers. Together, they also founded Disco Volante Records, which provided a platform for artists including Rayko, Lazy Kiss, Sare Havlicek, and Craxi Disco.

IDW released both original music and remixes on labels like Bordello A Parigi, Nang, Emerald & Doreen, and No Static. They also gained attention through their reinterpretations, including a winning remix for Lindstrøm's Feedelity label contest. Performances took them to Paris, Moscow, Milan, Rome, and beyond, marking a period of wide-ranging European activity.

Biography & Career Timeline

Luxembourg Renaissance (2021–Present)

After moving to Luxembourg in 2017, Andrea paused IDW but later revived the project as a solo venture in 2021. His releases since then have appeared on Rare Wiri, Spa In Disco, Astrolead, Boite Music, Toto and Burning Synths.

Andrea's productions reflect his eclectic influences: a blend of nu-disco, space disco, and Italo disco layered with house grooves, funky basslines, and occasional synthwave textures. As a DJ, he follows the same path, weaving disco-rooted sounds with house energy to create vibrant, dancefloor-focused sets.

Beyond producing, Andrea became an active part of Luxembourg's electronic community, playing at venues like De Gudde Wëllen and Rocas, and festivals such as Yalloh Tronic and Francofolies. He also joined the Ableton User Group Luxembourg, sharing production techniques with fellow musicians.

Since January 2024, he hosts "Electronic Emotions" on RadioARA, a monthly show highlighting electronic sounds he values, with a special emphasis on local talent.

Personal Evolution

April 2025 brought Andrea's first EP under his own name. The RAW EP reflects on contemporary social tensions, with artwork embedding "War" into the design as a counterpoint to the title. Transitioning from collaborative projects to music released under his own name signals a new chapter: one rooted in personal expression while still connected to the collective energy of the scenes he's part of. Between productions, teaching, and his radio show, Andrea continues to bridge local and international communities within electronic music.
